MAINE BEARS ARE HARD DRINKERS

Bangor, Oct. 30.—"All the bears of Penobscot county I have ever known," said William Babcock, of Bradley, "feel as if they cannot den up for the winter till after they have had a protracted drunk from eating crab apples that have stayed on the trees cold nights until they were frozen clear through and then hung out and thawed in the sunlight and repeated the operation until fermentation set in and the sweet cider has turned to a good imitation of old Medford corn."

"Of course a bear that is real fat, so fat that his eyes are closing up and making him blind, will stagger away to some old blowdown and hide away under the protecting trunk of a rotting tree and go off into its winter snooze without any sleeping position; but an average bear that is young and active seems to dread going to sleep for six months on a stretch, and puts it off as long as it can and gets drunk and blunders away to the nearest hiding place and drops off to sleep in an intoxicated stupor."

"It is too bad to have a respectable young bear that has passed the summer in picking and eating berries, and that has put on its last layer of fat from gathering and eating mellow windfalls in the autumn orchards, get into the liquor habit."

"An overdose of hard cider made from fermented apple juice has the same effect on bears that it does on men, and makes them careless of their own welfare and quarrelsome and generally disagreeable."

"I wish the Maine prohibitory law could get at those ungoverned apples and put a stop to drunkenness among bears, but I fear the reform movement will arrive too late to do any good to the bears. I have already killed two promising young bears this fall because of their weakness for strong drink, and if the snow holds off long enough I may see two or three more though I am ashamed of my conduct."
